

House 1

House One is a compact brick home on a quiet corner lot near a small park. Its front porch faces east, catching cool sunlight during breakfast. Inside, the plan centers on an open living room, dining area, and practical kitchen with oak cabinets. Two bedrooms sit along a private hallway, while a third room works as an office or guest space. Large windows bring garden views into every shared room. The backyard is modest but well arranged, with a patio, vegetable beds, and a shaded bench beneath a maple tree. Storage is efficient, including attic access, fixed shelves, and a single car garage. The home suits someone who values easy upkeep, walkable errands, and a gentle daily rhythm. It feels warm, sensible, and ready for quiet evenings, weekend gardening, and friendly conversations by the door. Energy use remains low because insulation is updated, the roof is new, and the heating system is efficient. The nearest school, grocery, library, and bus stop are all within ten minutes on foot. This home balances privacy with connection, offering enough room to grow without turning routine care into a demanding project. Every detail supports a comfortable, calm, everyday life for years ahead.
